A book by Lysa Terkeust

While I was on library duty, I decided to borrow this book, thinking it wouldn't hurt. Reading has always been a source of comfort for me. Little did I know that this book would have such a profound impact on me; it felt like an answered prayer.

This year has thrown a lot at us, and there have been countless nights when we found ourselves awake, praying to God. It's been a challenging season, where going to church, attending Bible study, and even praying have been tough tasks.

During our third bout with COVID-19, while I was on home quarantine, I managed to finish this book. Being a housewife isn't easy. I've been juggling household chores, and problems, and trying to learn new things for the past few months. A 5-minute quiet time has become precious to me. I've been so distracted by the demands of life that one night, I found myself crying myself to sleep, telling God I had no time and that I missed my quiet moments when I was single. I confessed to God that I couldn't even relax when I closed my eyes at night. Constant worries about the future, where we'd live, and what I'd be doing in the coming months had taken over. The waiting season tested my patience, and I felt like I was running out of Bible verses to stay grounded and kind. At times, my only comfort was within the four walls of my home, and I avoided reaching out to people.

Yet, God never disappointed. Through this book, I learned that Jesus is with us in every season. I was reassured that God loves me as His daughter, and I am His child.

As I finished each chapter, it became an opportunity for my husband and me to discuss what I'd read. I'm grateful that God spoke to me through the pages of this book, bringing joy to our mealtime conversations. Once again, God comforted me, reminding me that He hears my prayers and delights in deepening my intimacy with Him. I felt and experienced God in my everyday, mundane life. He reminded me that He created us uniquely, with distinct personalities, interests, and passions, so we can share His Gospel with others. Loving Him isn't about performance; it's a lifestyle. We may have missed the Sunday Service, but we were grateful to attend the Good Friday service. God reminded us that we are His mirrors, His salt, and His light in this world, within our community and our circle. He doesn't call the qualified but qualifies those He calls to serve. No matter how crooked, broken, or shattered we are, Jesus overcame death to allow us sweet communion and comfort with Him. It's comforting to know that even in quarantine, we can follow Jesus and serve God by loving one another.

Having COVID-19 made us realize how short we are in terms of our health, wealth, and portion. We desperately need God in our lives because He alone provides the greatest peace and satisfaction. My encouragement to you, my friend, is to allow God to reveal His love, grace, and mercy to you on ordinary days. Never forget to thank God for His greatest gift to us—the Cross. Use your talents, treasures, and time in serving God. Inhale God's grace and exhale His loving kindness to those around you. To God be the glory.
